ODISEO Issue 23: Summer 2017

Industrial PhDs and the recruitment of talent

Spotting and retaining talent is a key element to determine the success of any kind of company. Take a look at the insights of our Director, Eduard Rodés, on this delicate matter, with special reference to the Transport and Logistics field.

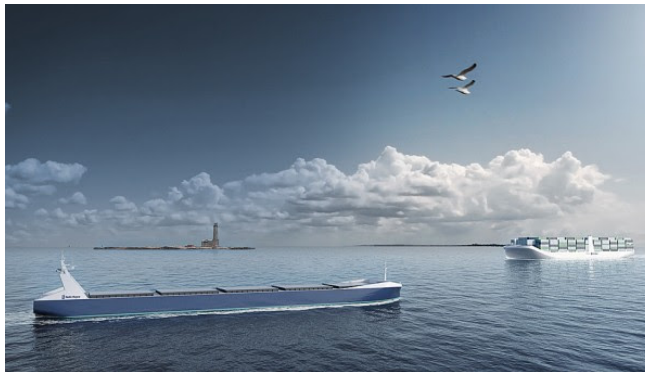

“After High School the students have the option to focus on Transport and Logistics in their Higher Education. One option is the University Degree and another one is the Advanced vocational education and training, where students can get a degree as Advanced Technician. These studies are currently available in many High Schools. However, the trend of including advanced vocational education in the educational offer is spreading throughout European universities at a high pace.”
